

MEDIATION ADVOCACY TRAINING WORKSHOP

8 and 15 October 2022 (Saturdays)
14:30 to 17:30 on each day via ZOOM

Despite the widespread use of mediation, mediation advocacy remains one of the most overlooked and underestimated facets of its practice. It is different in many ways from court advocacy or other types of advocacy. This two-day workshop organised by the Hong Kong Bar Association (HKBA) will examine the role of the mediation advocate, the essential skills and techniques that he needs to deploy at various stages of the mediation process, as well as issues of professional and ethical conduct faced by the mediation advocate. It will also explore how barristers and solicitors may apply or adapt their lawyering skills to mediation.

The format of the workshop will be a mixture of practical lectures, group discussion and supervised practice. The latter will take place in real-time breakout rooms with a coach leading a mock mediation session with 4 participants, who are expected to take an active part and receive feedback.

This online course is open to HKBA members and pupils as well as all other professionals interested in mediation advocacy. Successful registrants will receive a ZOOM link and course materials in due course. Places are strictly limited. First-come-first-served.
